

Abstract

An electric power steering apparatus can correspond to high output ability, and has a power transmission mechanism of an electric driving section capable of achieving predetermined slip torque in spite of change of operating temperature. Also, a resin gear for power transmission is formed by joining a core metal and a resin with strong bonding force, and has preferable heat-dissipation property. This joining is performed by way of chemical bond according to composite molding technique or adhesive.

204720" 2096480T 10849602.021402